

APPIAN UTILITY FOR FAST RESULTS

Bits In Glass

Your Business. Optimized.

Developers are always time sensitive and require useful utilities to help them shorten development cycles wherever possible. Bits In Glass' DocuSign utility is a re-usable integration that speeds development time by giving Appian designers plug and play functionality, allowing them to quickly and easily integrate DocuSign into applications. Providing a full range of functionality, developers can rely on the DocuSign utility to handle all aspects of the signing process; from signature requests all the way through to follow-up communications.

WHAT IS AN APPIAN UTILITY?

An Appian utility is a ready to use component that allows the simple integration of pre-built capabilities from other Appian developers and third-party services into new and existing applications. Utilities provide customers with a “running head start” so they can quickly incorporate functionality that would typically require several weeks of research and development if starting from scratch. Appian utilities reduce implementation timelines and increase an application's ability to achieve quick return on investment.

The best part about Appian utilities is that they're tools you can quickly incorporate into your business application, requiring only minor modifications.
